THOMAS A. BALDWIN

In the summer of 1942, a member of the Evanston faculty laid aside his duties as history teacher and home room director for those of a Lieutenant in the United States Navy. After his training at Cornell and Harvard, he paused in Evanston for a brief visit on his way to active duty in the Pacific. His many friends were stunned to learn shortly afterward of his death in a plane crash over Idaho. With a keen sense of loss and with great esteem, the Class of 1943 dedicates its Yearbook to the memory of Lieutenant Thomas Baldwin, U.S.N., the first from Evanston Township High School in the second World War to lose his life in the service of his country.

FOREWORD

On this sixtieth anniversary of the founding of Evanston Township High School, the staff of the 1943 Yearbook has set for itself a dual purpose: to present the normal school life of Evanston today—its activities both shadowed and stimulated by the war—against a background of brief glimpses into the six decades of growth and change. The editors have for the first time presented at the end of the book an individual record of senior activities, to show the contributions of the class to many war projects and to reflect in accurate perspective these and other services of their class to the life of the school.

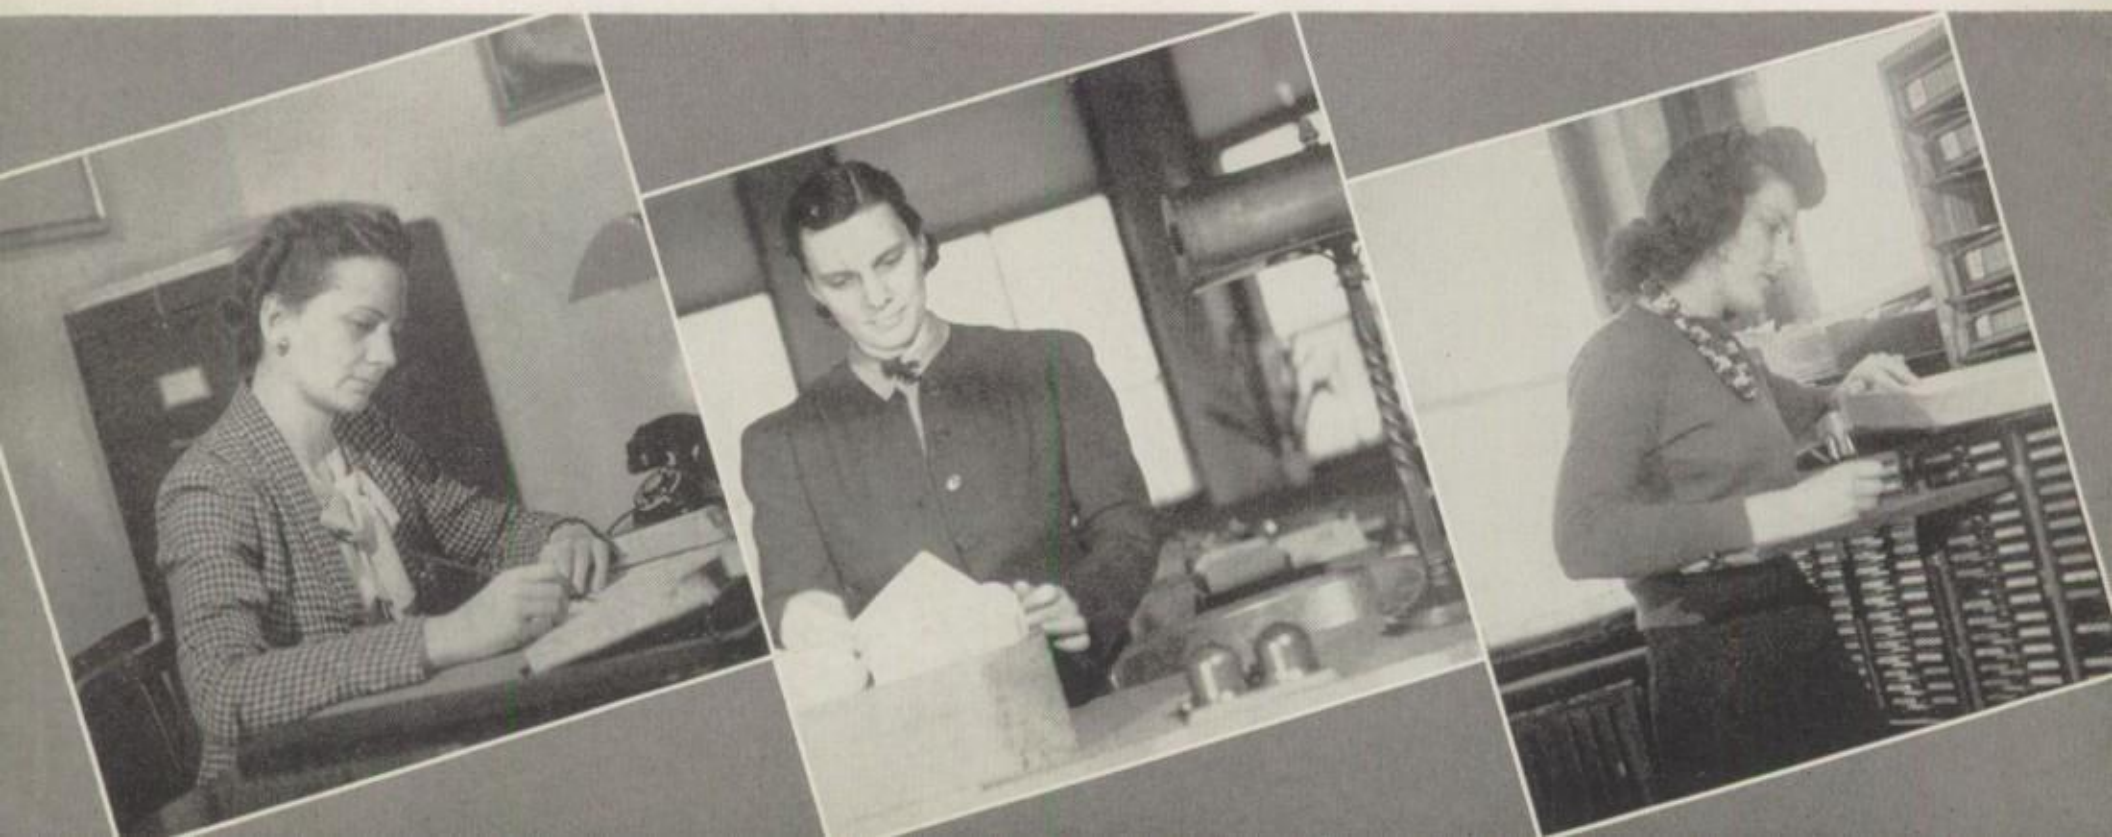

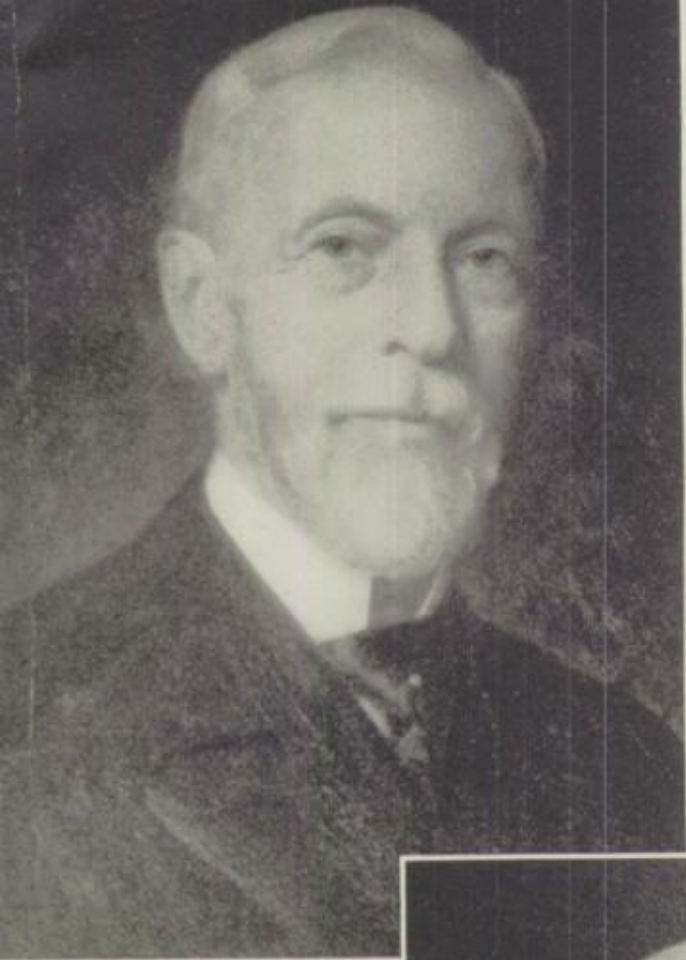

WALTER L. BARNUM

The man behind the scenes who arranges the curriculum, directs summer school, and is assistant principal during the regular session is Mr. Barnum. He acts also as head of the science department.

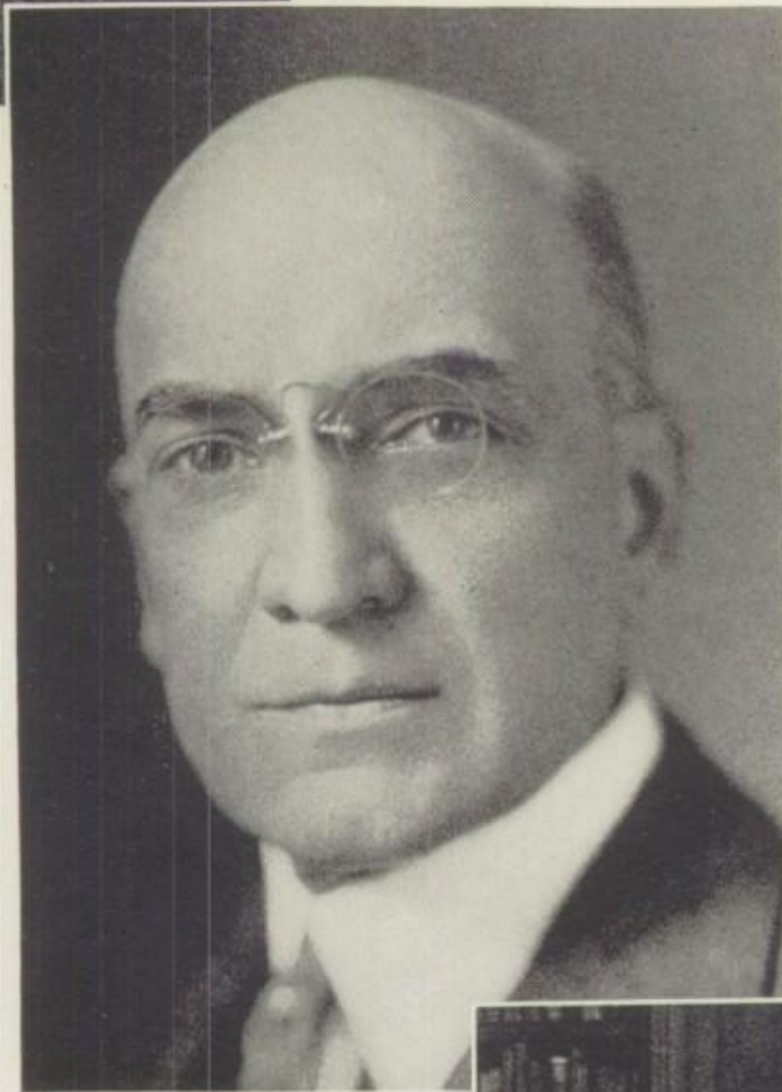

General secretary of the office, whose many duties include arranging examinations, receiving new students, and answering the query, "May I schedule a meeting?" is Miss Winifred Eastman. For transcripts of their credits, seniors apply to the recorder, Miss Ann Nichols. Miss Virginia Park is secretary to Mr. Bacon.

THREE SCORE YEARS

HENRY L. BOLTWOOD
1883-1906

In sixty years of growth Evanston Township High School has had only three principals—Mr. Boltwood, Mr. Beardsley, and Mr. Bacon. Under these three diverse and forceful personalities the school has developed a strong tradition while adapting itself steadily to new times, and has achieved and maintained eminence among American high schools.

FRANCIS LEONARD BACON

Miss Murphy, Mr. Leach, Mr. Irish, Mr. Parson, Mr. Wood, Mr. Barnum, Mr. Bacon, Mr. Melvin, Mr. Jones, Mr. Nuckols, Mr. Hostetler, Mr. MacConnell, Mr. Cameron.

HOME ROOM DIRECTORS

The eleven home room directors, those good-natured leaders who bear the penalty when their rooms lose in inter-room competition, act both as principals of their rooms and as chief advisers. Their responsibilities as advisers increased as many questions arose involving enlistment, draft, deferment, and accelerated college programs.

Miss Murphy, head of the mathematics department and administrative assistant, was the only new director. For war economy, the 324 wing was closed in September.

Student contributions to the war effort have been coördinated during the year through the E.T.H.S. Victory Corps under the chairmanship of Stan Hamilton. This corps is part of a national organization to encourage participation in war activities and to prepare students for the armed services.

JEEPers!

The sanctity of the school halls was broken last fall by the wild ride of a U. S. Army "jeep" as it roared its appeal for war stamp sales. The result of this campaign and many others like it was a sale of approximately forty thousand dollars worth of war stamps.

WAR CHEST

The War Chest's slogan, "Double the gift for twice the need," was completely fulfilled. Warner Gabel and Mitchell Campbell, the managers of the drive, explained that the total of $420.17 would be devoted to a combination of relief drives all consolidated in the War Chest. The spirit and results of the E.T.H.S. campaign were highly commended by the central committee of the Evanston War Chest Drive.

MINUTE MEN

The responsibility for the success of war stamp sales rested upon the shoulders of Dave deSwarte and his assistants, the home room sales managers. Largely through their efforts nearly ninety percent of the students regularly purchased war stamps each Wednesday. The final goal of the war stamp sales was the flying of a Minute Man flag for ninety percent participation.

IT CAN HAPPEN HERE

The Junior Air Raid Wardens were organized through a general survey conducted by Hawley Smith at the beginning of the school year. Under the auspices of Quadrangle, four instructional classes were held concerning incendiary bombs and fire fighting. Eight hundred and fifty boys received the instruction.

The wardens made two canvasses of the Evanston area to gather information as to war service and salvage. In connection with these, they helped with gas and oil rationing and distributed pamphlets and questionnaires to every home in Evanston. Assisted by five hundred girls, the wardens collected approximately twelve thousand books to restock the libraries of the armed services and assisted in the city-wide Victory collection. The final accomplishment was the qualification of three hundred junior air raid wardens for certificates as O.C.D. messengers.

Among the technical war courses begun this year are those pictured above and, in addition, mathematics refresher, arithmetic refresher, calculating machines, nutrition, and war photography. The electricity and mechanics, radio, and blueprint reading classes have largely concentrated upon fundamentals. In aeronautics, the program has included Air Corps speakers, films, and various projects. The purpose of these courses has been to prepare students for the many necessary technical positions in the armed forces.

B, TO BANDAGES

The Junior Red Cross, home nursing classes, first aid classes, and the health commission furthered the war effort. The Junior Red Cross obtained $641.80 for the Roll Call and War Fund and sent forty game boards, hundreds of magazines, and three hundred attractive menu covers to the Marine Hospital in Chicago. The home nursing and first aid classes presented speakers and practical work, while the health commission promoted nutrition, athletics, and exercise throughout the year to keep the students continually conscious of good health practices.

More than 350 cadets, the largest Corps in history, had a banner year. Conscious from the first of the opportunities as well as the limitations occasioned by the war, the cadets took added interest in subjects which will prove of great benefit when they enter the armed forces.

Colonel James Ferguson, regimental commander, had as his Executive Officer and second in command Lt. Col. Peter Palfrey, who, on entering college at the end of the first semester, was replaced by Paul Cook. Majors Charles Champe and Tom Woods commanded the two battalions, and Capt. Jerome Head was regimental adjutant.

The rifle team established itself as one of the strongest in the country by capturing the Midwest Championship for the second successive year, and overwhelming all opposition in dual shoulder-to-shoulder competition. High man for the year was Capt. Charles Booz.

In long hours of practice the Corps Rifles, commanded by Major Champe, developed a series of intricate maneuvers which they displayed before various civic groups and at the annual demonstration.

Early morning formations during the autumn and spring welded the units together into a well drilled organization. Dummy wooden rifles replacing the Springfields confiscated last year by the government proved satisfactory for drilling.

A system of efficiency reports, based on demerits and credits, was employed to determine the best of the six companies over a prescribed competitive period. Each cadet in the honor company was entitled to wear an honor bar and the company guidon to carry the honor streamer.

Uniforms glittered and formals swished at the traditional Corps Ball, held in a patriotically decorated Social Hall. Sgt. Robert Finegan led the under-classmen through the arch of sabres formed by the senior officers.

The Corps banquet, the formation the cadets look forward to with the most anticipation, had to be abandoned this year because of rationing. Instead, a suitable formation was substituted, at which time next year's officers were announced and awards given to deserving cadets.

RIGHT DRESS!

In the first World War, Evanston High girls organized a Drill Corps, which was commanded by Captain Franklin Bliss Snyder. This year, more than 150 girls formed a second Drill Corps. Officers of the M.T.C. under Captain Robert Buckley instructed them in the fundamentals of drill and command. Because of the large enrollment, the girls divided into two sections, each meeting twice a week. As they became more proficient, outstanding girls among them were chosen by competitive examinations to become officers, and gradually to take over more of the responsibility. For their uniforms, the girls selected navy blue skirts, white blouses with blue ties, and saddle shoes. The faculty sponsor, Miss Frances Johnson, planned to have the Corps make its first public appearance in these uniforms at the Corps Demonstration.

QUADRANGLE • PENTANGLE

Quadrangle and Pentangle have both been engrossed this year in the war effort. Together they conducted the Victory book drive for the whole city. Quadrangle has continued its junior air raid warden system while the girls have conducted scrap drives, made gift boxes for soldiers, and sewed bandages. Sam Robinson led the boys and "Roz" Kirkpatrick the girls.

NEWS...

For the second year in succession, the "Evanstonian" ranks as "Pacemaker," that is, it is judged among the fifteen best school papers examined by the National Scholastic Press Association. James Bayer as editor-in-chief and Charlotte Woods as associate editor are proud of their competent staff working under Grant J. Verhulst, faculty adviser. New features of the newspaper this year are a page devoted to war features and news of alumni in service and another page devoted to poems and articles written by students. Miss Mary L. Taft is adviser of the literary page.

Business Staff: Margaret Mason, Kathryn Rall, Gloria Dorband, Nancy Swaney.

Editors: Fred Crawford, Neil Hiatt, Frances Mackay, Karl Benjamin. (Not shown, Laurice Lang.)

Literary Staff: Stanley Hamilton, Frances Mackay, Betty Hahne, Mary Ann Armistead, James Ferguson, Clarence Peterson.

A ROYAL FLUSH

Important among girls' organizations in the school is the Girls' Activities Committee, whose chairman this year has been Marjorie Kempnick. Five sophomore girls are chosen by the club each year by merit form, and these girls serve until their graduation.

Because of the war, the G.A.C. gave up its benefit card party, ordinarily its largest annual undertaking, and instead raised funds by selling carnations once a week.

Gas rationing and the tire shortage have left the traffic court with much less to do this year than before. However, the doors of the court were always kept open to make possible friendly warnings to careless students. Reid Curtis was chief justice of the traffic court.

In addition to its regular activities such as the monthly accident reports and bicycle reports, the safety council has been kept busy with war work such as conducting the "walk to school" campaign for the Victory Corps. The council has been guided by Blaine Manker, president, and Mr. Leach, faculty adviser.

IN CLUBS

CAMERA CLUB

Camera fans under the presidency of Neil Hiatt meet often to compare and criticize negatives and prints and to perfect themselves in the technical magic of the dark room. What is Greek to the uninitiated is music to the ears of camera enthusiasts, when Mr. Hughes, faculty adviser, explains the secrets and tricks of better photography. The club also sponsors lunch-hour movies.

"E" CLUB

Collecting tickets at basketball and football games and helping coaches and teachers to supervise these games are members of the "E" club, which is composed of boys who have won their letter in a major sport. Their emblem, the big orange "E", is a familiar sight in the halls.

SADDLE CLUBS

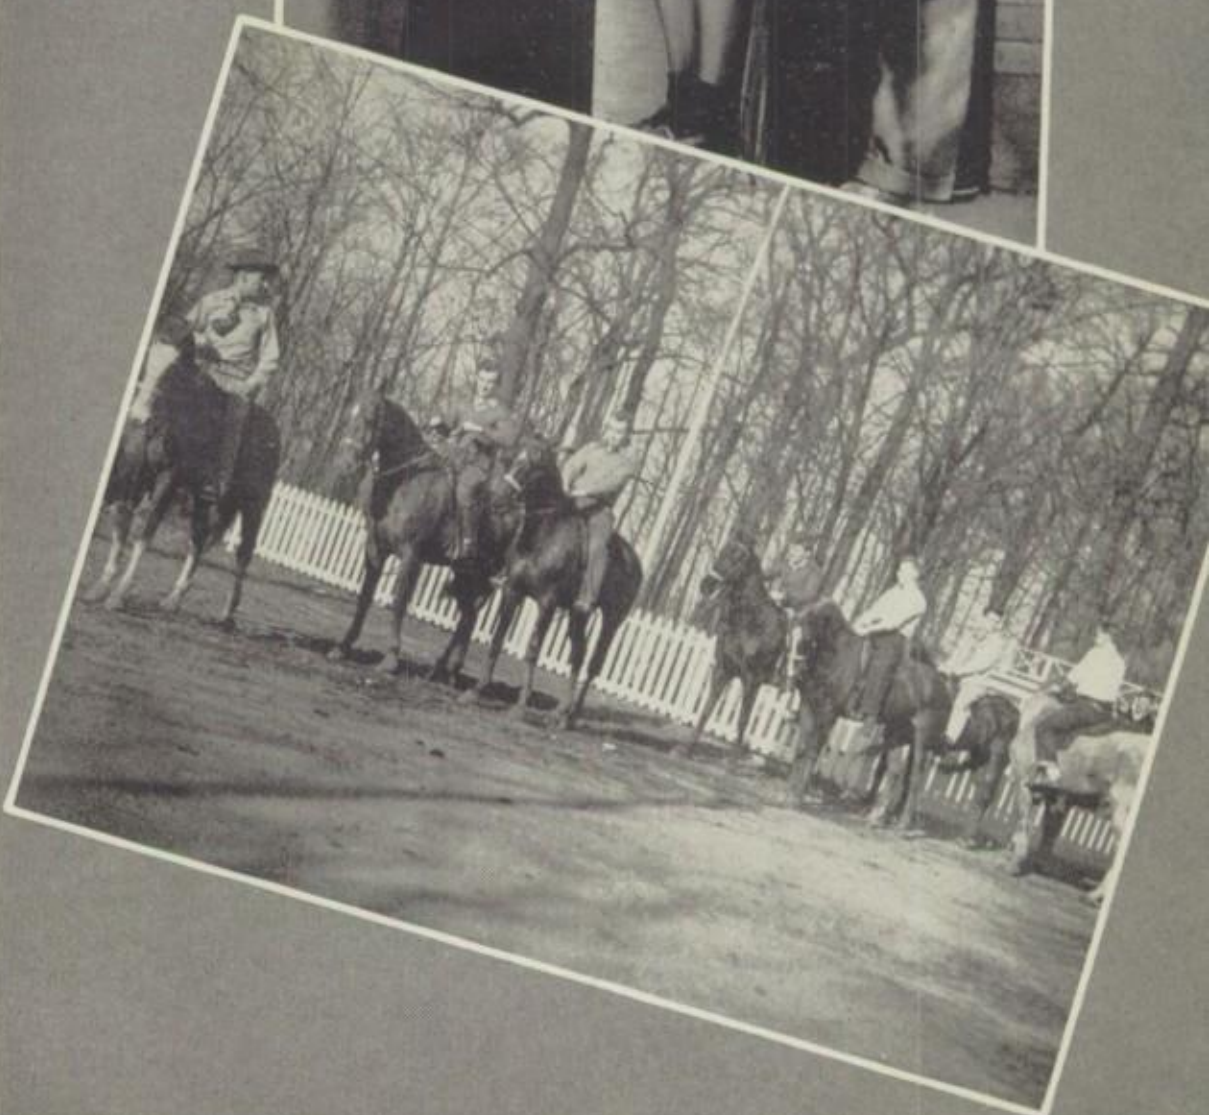

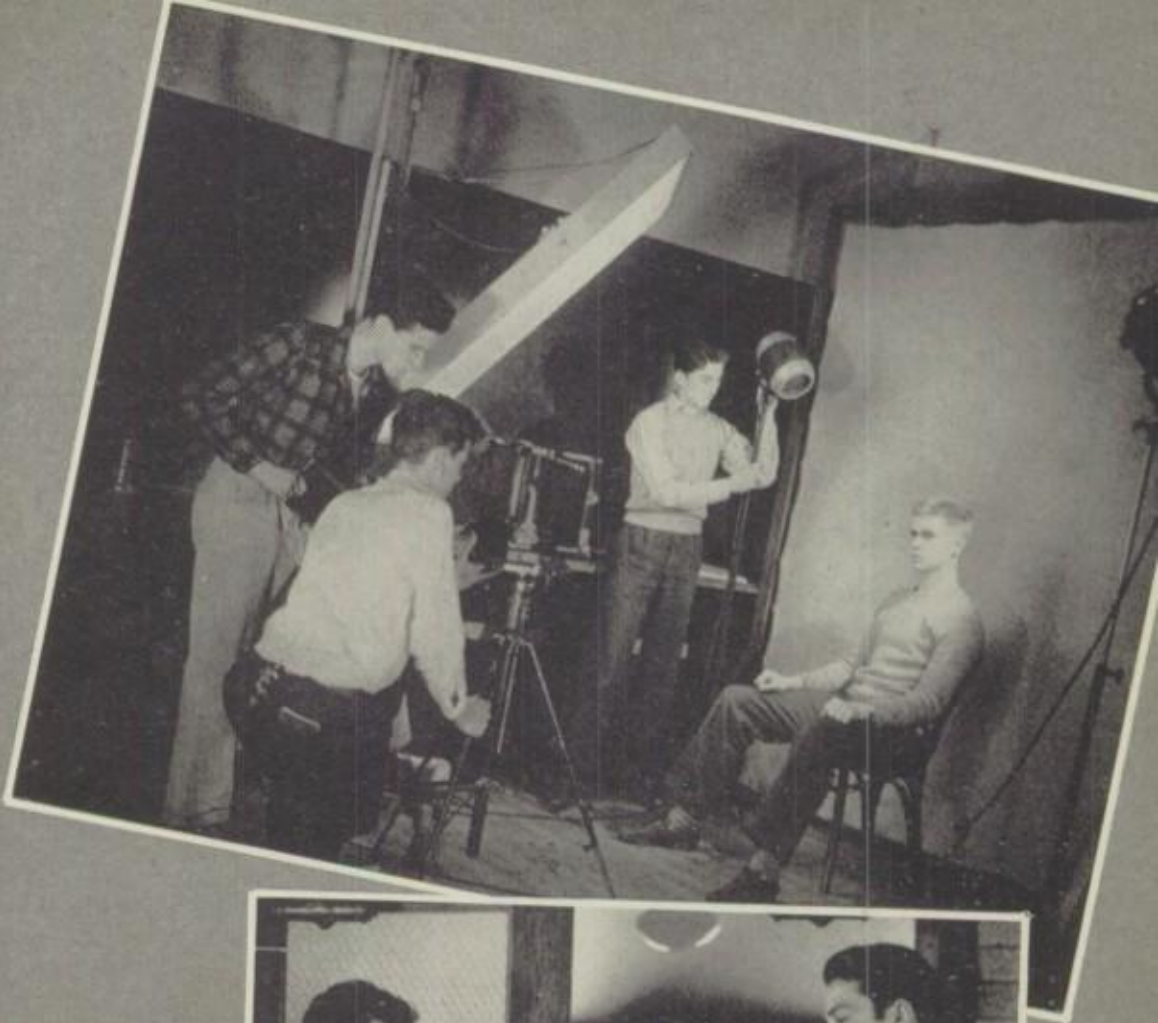

The boys' and girls' saddle clubs are two of the newer organizations. One day each week a station wagon stops to take the riders to the stables, where they can ride in a sheltered ring in bad weather or trot along the wooded paths of the forest preserves on sunny days. The two clubs are separate and ride at different stables.

CROWN-ING SALES

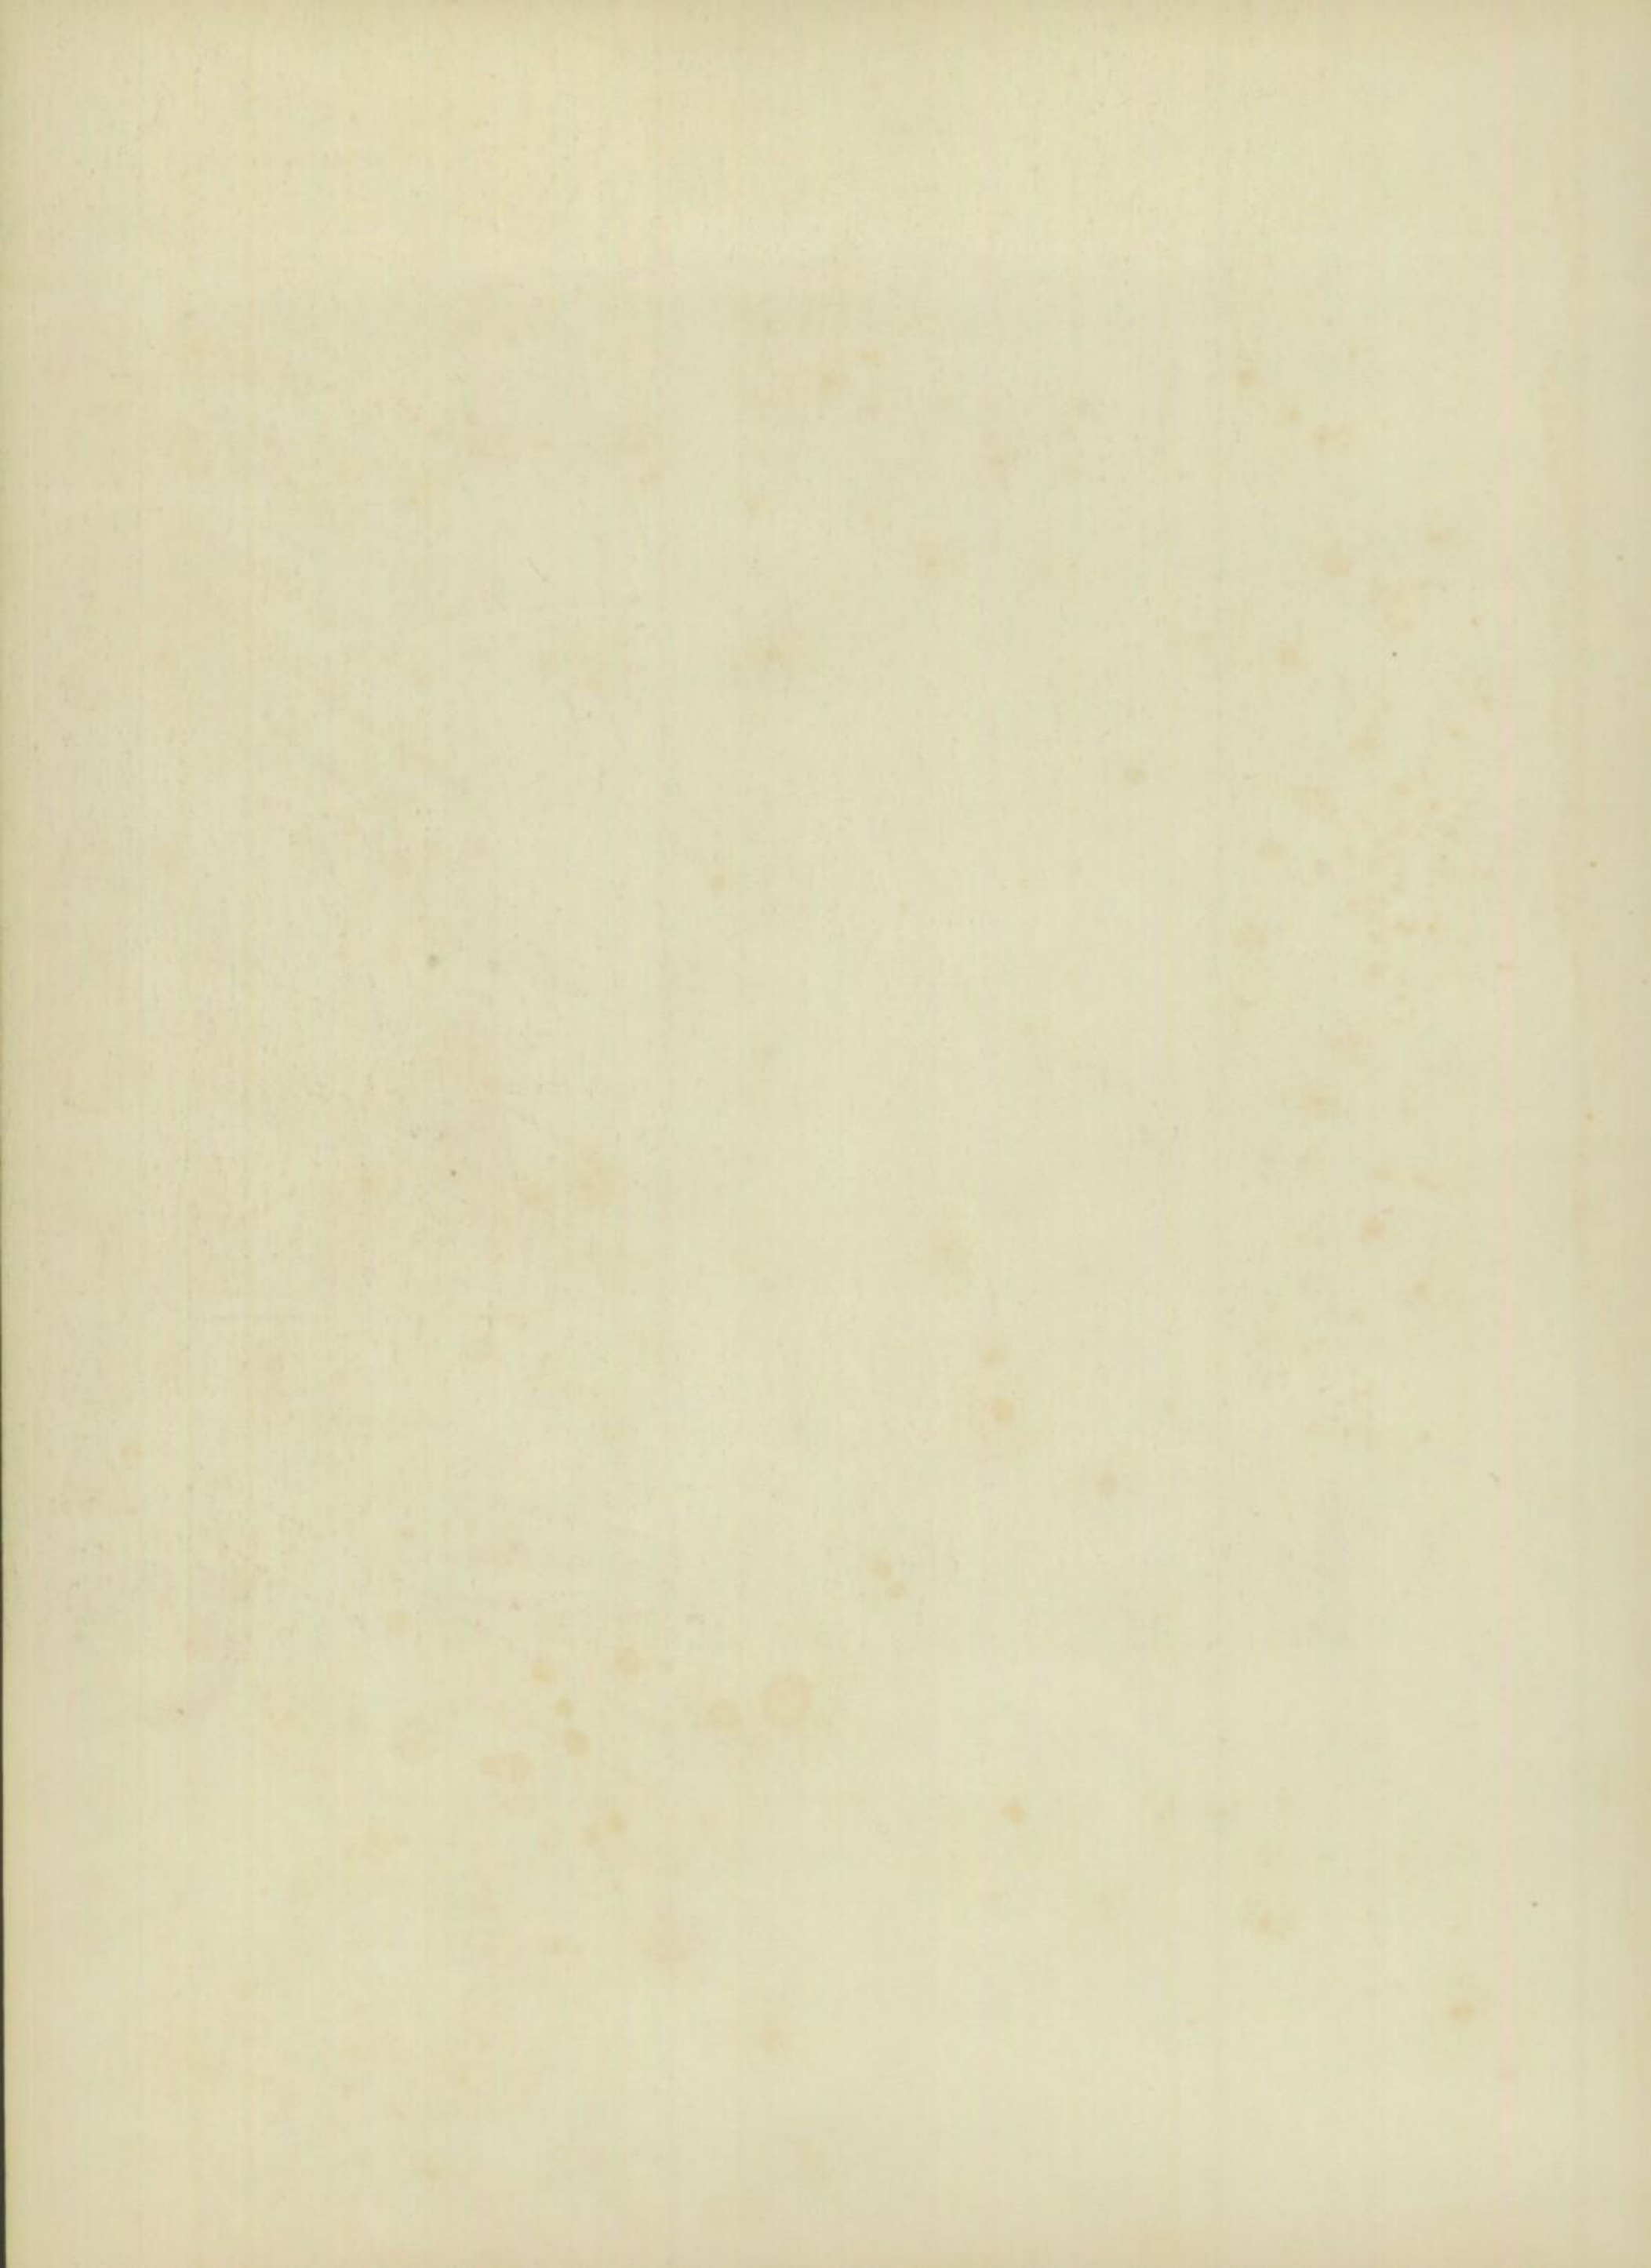

After Clarence Peterson had sold out the greatest bargain in the world — or at least in the school — students plunged into the tense competition of the annual sale of magazine subscriptions. Lester Crown, manager of the campaign, and Mr. Melvin, faculty adviser, proudly counted the largest total sales ever rolled up. Room 304 was high room and Bill Tatge was the highest individual salesman.

BOOKIES

With its twenty-eight thousand volumes, its current magazines, pamphlets, exhibit cases, and gay posters, the library is the melting pot of varied interests. Delving into books or periodicals and sometimes meeting that "certain one" from another home room, Evanston students pass many pleasant hours in the library.

COUNT FLEET

Evanston graduates will not be found incapable of making their way in the business world. A business course supervised by capable instructors offers every phase of secretarial and stenographic training, a valuable service since approximately thirty percent of the graduates of E.T.H.S. enter the business world.

TRIPLETS

IT'S WILD LIFE

With the arrival of Mr. Krul, who replaced Howard E. Gotsch on his joining the Air Corps, the greenhouse changed from an exhibition of tropical beauty and experimental horticulture to a nursery. The victory gardens near the boys' tennis courts were greatly enlarged and the variety of crops increased, converting the study of horticulture to a war industry.

FIESTA SIESTA

The cafeteria made many adjustments to meet the shortages of food and labor. The two-lane service counters were reduced to single lanes and prices advanced a cent or two. Despite less ice cream and a limited choice of candy, the cafeteria was still a place of recreation and fun with its crowded and bubbling tables and occasional serenades to a blushing birthday celebrator.

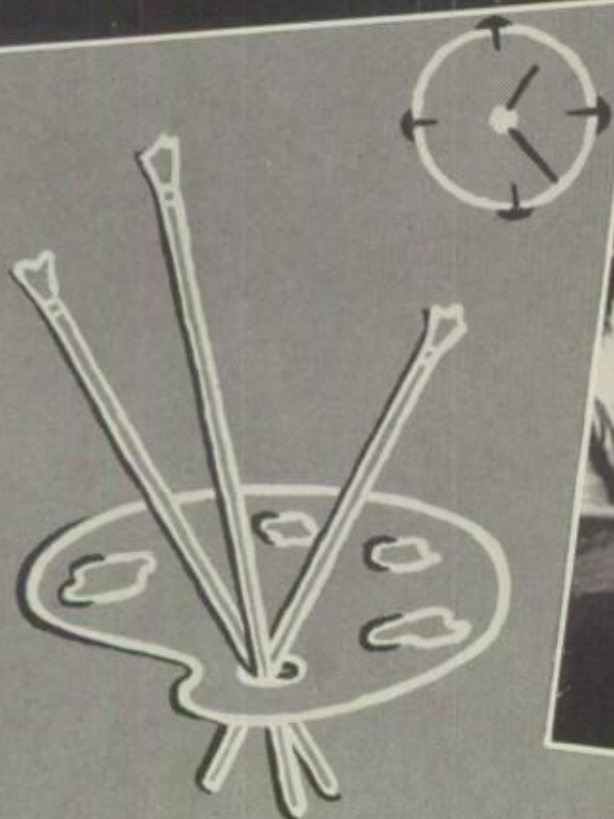

TOOLING AROUND

Exquisite paintings of still life and gay portfolios of varied designs furnished attractive displays in the show cases this year. Miss Goffe's art classes exhibited still life drawings in charcoal and advanced into painting and to pen and ink sketches.

Arts and crafts classes under Mr. Hollis Wilson combined the creative with the practical, making tooled leather purses and wallets, attractive metal bowls and plates, and unusual book ends.

In circle: Laurice Lang, art editor of Yearbook, and Jean Cramer consulting Miss Goffe.

ON THE HOME FRONT

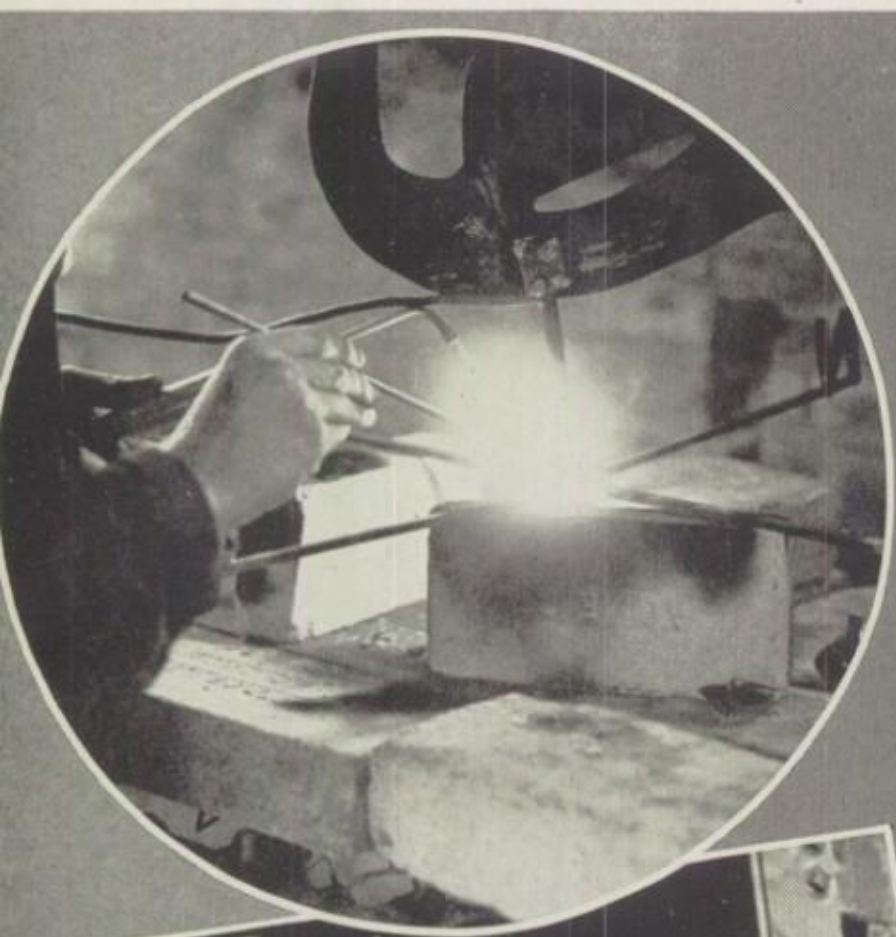

In the home economics department, headed by Miss Ziller and Miss Brumbaugh, girls do more than learn cooking, sewing, interior decorating, and household management. They also gain knowledge and training of special use in wartime home making—home nursing, nutrition, food management, and what the consumer should know about quality and labels when buying.

MAN BEHIND THE MAN . . .

A visitor to the automobile mechanics classes might think he had entered a very busy downtown garage if it were not that mechanics are more plentiful here. Under the supervision of Mr. Arnold boys learn the mechanism of automobiles by actually servicing cars. The new hydraulic lift this year made the job easier and more thorough.

In "Shop" too tools are wielded with purpose and precision as jobs big and little are completed — from making furniture to outfitting the Girls' Drill Corps with insignia.

SOUND THE HORNS

Crowded Beardsley gymnasium rang out with carols and festive music at Christmas time when the mixed chorus, band, and orchestra presented the annual Christmas Festival. Although activities are continuous in the music department, this festival was one of the highlights of the year. The finale, Handel's "Messiah," greatly impressed the E.T.H.S. audience, as it had previously impressed the congregation at St. Luke's.

One of the outstanding events of the North Shore music world is Evanston High's annual Spring Festival, under the direction of Miss Sadie Rafferty. The Festival took on a much more modern aspect this year, the theme being the music of the United States and its allies. The Friday night performance featured songs by the male chorus—"Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" and "De Animals a Comin' "—and Miss Elaine Dahlgren singing "Credo," composed and conducted by Mr. David Van Vactor, an Evanston graduate of several years ago. Also popular with the audience was the orchestra's rendition of "Deep Purple," featuring E.T.H.S. pianist Elizabeth Hull. On Saturday night the program opened with a stirring arrangement of "The Star Spangled Banner" conducted by Captain Harold Bachman. Also featured were piano duets by Miss Hadassah McGiffin and Miss Claire Vander Griend, and presentation by the orchestra and chorus of "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God."

To climax what Miss Rafferty termed "a very successful year" was the operetta, Gilbert and Sullivan's comedy "Patience." This satire on "art for art's sake" records the conflict between the Fleshly Poet, Bunthorne, and the Idyllic Poet, Grosvenor. The excellent setting designs were suggested by Mr. Clarence Miller, former dramatics supervisor, who saw the Treasure Island production of "Patience." The cast of the operetta was as follows:

Colonel	Jim Horne, John Thomas
Major	Bob McCrosky, Dick Lutton
Duke	John Martin, Don Malin (understudy)
Bunthorne	Jack Gouldin, Boyd Quint
Grosvenor	Lee Hill, Dick Kielling (understudy)
Solicitor	Ted Koclanes, Bob Fort
Lady Angela	Dorrie Shearer, Nancy Noyes
Lady Saphir	Helen Goff, Norma Tarr
Lady Ella	Mary Reeser

Pat Vence	Barbara Fisher, Lucetta Runge

"DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY"

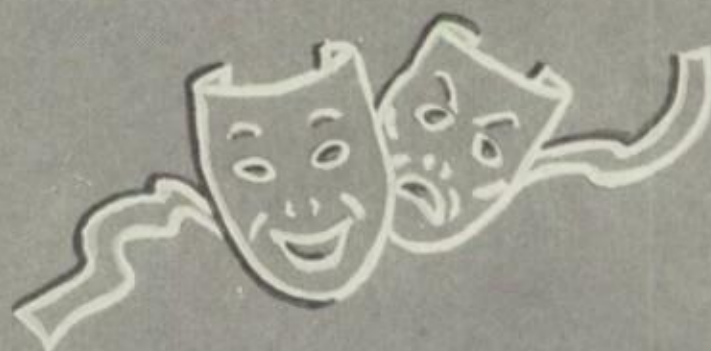

Came the big night and the very efficient make-up crew were putting on the finishing touches. The house lights darkened and the curtain rose on one of the most entertaining and successful plays E.T.H.S. has ever seen. The overcrowded Social Hall showed appreciation of "Death Takes a Holiday," the major production of the dramatics department this year. Although the play was not scheduled until February, preparation had begun in the early fall under the direction of Mr. Howard Wilson, the new dramatics supervisor. Student management was much more extensive this year than previously. For the first time the setting designs were done by Evanston students, Richard Lutton and

Donald Newhall, under the supervision of Miss Compere. Mr. Wilson also gave special praise to the "unsung heroes"—the very capable stage crew, and the lighting staff headed by John Wyer. Players featured in "Death Takes a Holiday" were:

Death	Charles Halvorsen
The Duke	Bruce Larson
Grazia	Lorelei Bird
Alda	Margaret Middlebrook
The Baron	Edward Bersbach
Roda	Patty Tucker
Stephanie	Marilyn Mortensen

BACKSTAGE . . .

Throughout the year the students were entertained by lunch hour plays directed by Miss Harriet Bachmann. These productions were not limited to the dramatics department alone; any student could try out for any part. "Freddie Freshman," a satire on the life of a "greenie" at E.T.H.S., was the first twenty-minute production. The fantasy, "The Wonder Hat," and comedies like "The Lost Elevator" and "Sparkin'" also entertained noontime audiences.

Because of the absence of the "Pot Pourri" of years gone by, the drama department managed to incorporate student talent into a variety show for lunch-hour audiences. Students laughed at the antics and applauded the talents of many of their classmates.

The dramatics department is an important part of Evanston High. During the year approximately four hundred fifty students have participated in productions by either acting, selling tickets; or being "unsung heroes."

Sixty years ago, in the fall of 1883, the Evanston Township High School first opened its doors in a small brick building on the corner of Dempster and Elmwood. The students all convened in one large room, while Mr. Boltwood, principal and founder, started the school session with a reading from the Bible.

By 1893 the attendance numbered two hundred twenty-five pupils. Mr. Beardsley, who became principal in 1905, saw the need for a larger building and had a larger and more modern structure erected around the former schoolhouse. In 1924 the cornerstone of the present building was laid.

When the school was entrusted to Mr. Bacon in 1929, the faculty had increased from the six original members to one hundred thirty. The number of courses offered had grown from a single classical course to seven courses including commerce, science, and manual training. At the beginning of Mr. Bacon's administration, the four publications of E.T.H.S. assumed their present form, emerging from the one magazine previously published. The M.T.C., organized during World War I, but disbanded, was reorganized.

The last fifteen years have shown steady development in the entire school process. Now E.T.H.S. is going through its third war experience. However, this World War promises to have a more lasting effect on school life than any other.

Bottom: Lochridge, Hamilton, Young, Strahs, Jones, Anderson, Lapp, Crawford, Agase, Woznicki.

Under the direction of a new coach, Mr. Rothacher, and assisted by the new athletic director, Mr. Samuelson, the football team began the season impressively. Of the first six games, the Evanston squad won four, lost one, and tied one. For the fourth victory, the Wildkits humbled Oak Park 12 to 0—the first defeat Oak Park had suffered since it was beaten by Evanston in 1940. After that victory, Evanston lost three hard-fought battles. At Dyche Stadium, Morton gained an early lead, which the second-half rally of the Kits did not quite overcome. A week later Evanston traveled to Moline to lose a heart-breaker by one point. Evanston lost to New Trier in the last game of the season.

Most of the team's success should be attributed to a strong passing attack and a powerful line. Passes, Lutz to Strahs and Strahs to Benington, made the twelve points that defeated Oak Park. A rugged line held down the opponents' scores in every game. Only New Trier, Suburban League champions, won by more than one touchdown.

The usual starting line-up consisted of Lochridge and Gabel, ends; Erickson and Lapp, tackles; Woznicki and Bessette, guards; Anderson, center; O'Brien, quarterback; Lutz and Strahs or Tower, halves; and Hauf, fullback. Agase, Allardice, VanGeem, Young, Snyder, Jones, and Benington saw frequent action and should be classed with the first team. Hauf, Benington, Jones, and Snyder headed a group of outstanding juniors that promises well for next year's team.

The gun went off a half second too soon in the Waukegan game, and what would have been the winning basket for the Wildkits was not counted. In the extra period Waukegan outscored Evanston by one point.

A first team would have to include Robinson, Cook, Rogers, Baudouine, Simms, O'Brien, Snyder, and Benington. By placing him at guard on the All-Suburban second team, the coaches recognized Robinson's floor play and offensive threat. They also mentioned Cook and Rogers as outstanding players.

DIAMOND DRILL

Baseball promised to be the most successful sport at Evanston this year. With several regulars back from last year and the other positions well fortified, Mr. Wilson's team had balance, hitting power, and a good pitching staff. In five practice games, Evanston won by lopsided scores. The starting line-up consisted of Hamilton, Hauf, and O'Brien in the outfield; Scott, Woznicki, Simms, and Agase in the infield; Johns catching; and Strahs or Remke pitching.

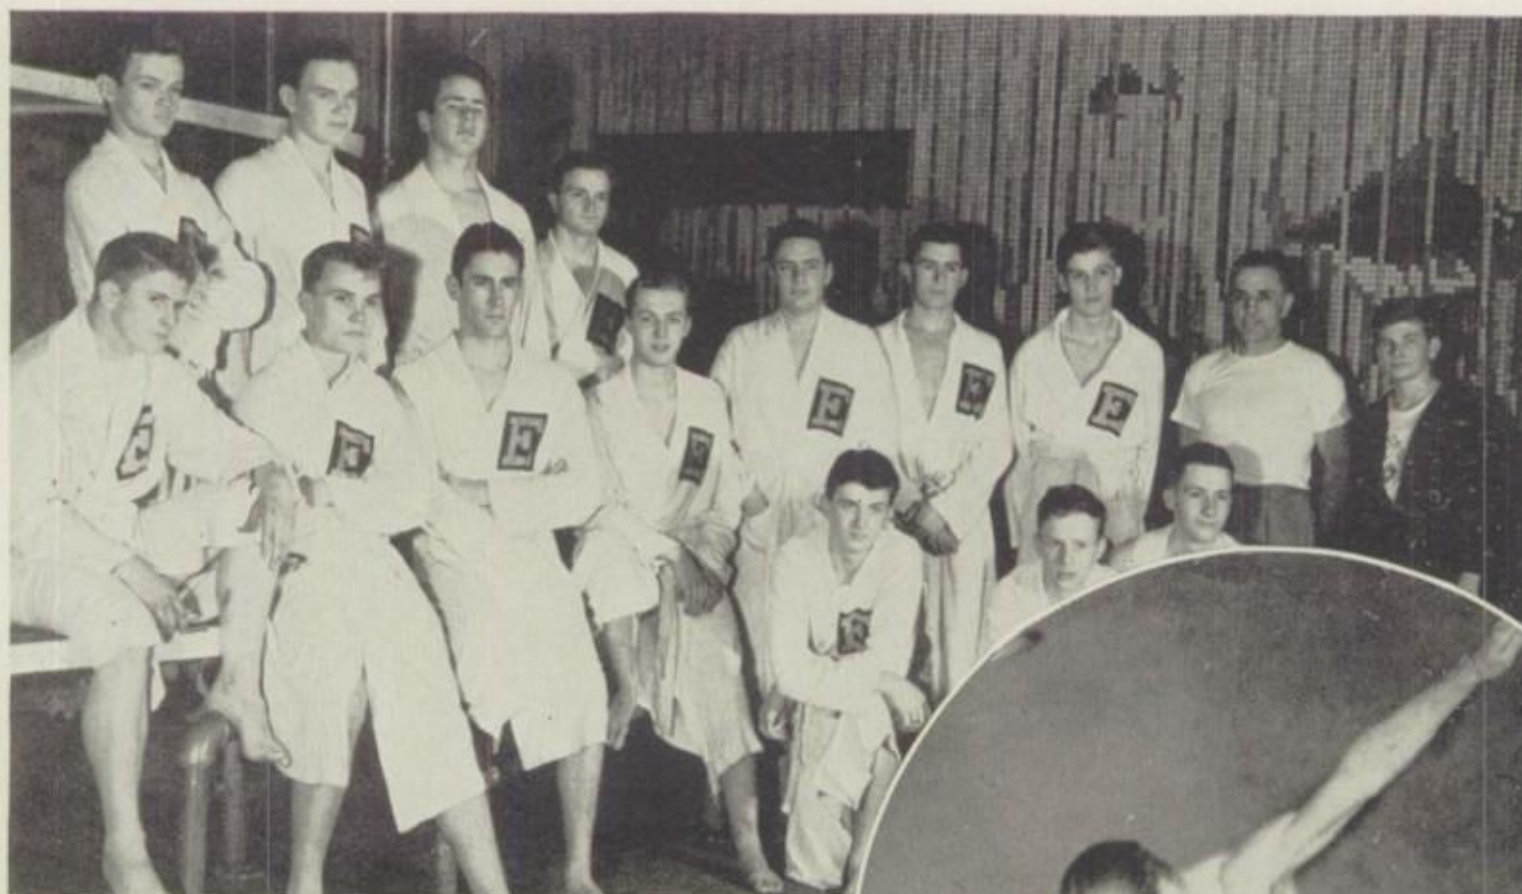

POOL

The diver, Harned, made most of the swimming fortunes of the Wildkit team. He led the team to third place in the Suburban League and placed in the state meet. Other outstanding members of the team were Dale, Simmons, Smith, Brushingham, Garwood, Cooper, Needler, Westerberg and Cook. Mr. Rothacher took over the coaching duties of "Doc" Parker, who had entered the army.

Of all the athletic teams, track has been hardest hit by the war. Four members, about whom the team was built, left school for the armed forces or specialized college training. However, with few facilities for indoor training, Mr. Schultz's squad earned third place in the Suburban League indoor track meet.

Although because of transportation difficulties the Suburban League had officially disbanded after the winter sports, an invitational meet of the suburban schools was held at Evanston late in the season.

Whitelaw, Cocallas, Boswell, Gillham and Thompson were the sprinters; LaBahn and Pemberton, distance runners; Schulte, Lawless, Rogers, and Squires, hurdlers; Benington and Jones, pole vaulters; and deSwarte, discus thrower.

SPORTLIGHTS

Led by three returning lettermen, Baudouine, Lochridge and Robinson, Mr. Buffmire's golf team had bright prospects. The team provided strong competition for the other entrants in the district tournament and the matches that were played with other schools along the North Shore.

Under the direction of Mr. Haas, the tennis squad started practice as soon as winter sports ended. Griffin, Arries, Wallace, Crouse and Burns form a well balanced team that walked away with the district title. Griffin (pictured above) and Arries defeated Wallace and Burns in the doubles final.

MUSCLE BOUND

"Ten Burpees!" And at this familiar command legs and arms flew in the junior and senior girls' Victory gym classes. These classes, meeting on alternate days in addition to the regular gym periods, were intended to limber "those hidden muscles." The girls tested their agility on an indoor commando course and exercised strenuously in marching on to "Health for Victory!"

GOOD AT ATHLETICS

Under the leadership of Marjilou Miles, the G.A.A. stimulated a greater interest in afterschool sports than ever before. The intramural basketball tournament broke all records by completing a season with no defaulted games. The newly added sports, volleyball and tumbling, were also popular.

Besides participating in sports, the girls spent many enjoyable hours at the quarterly parties. The last event of the year was the annual beach picnic where the retiring senior board members were given a lively de-nitiation.

TILL IT'S OVER OVER THERE

Eighty upperclassmen left during the school year, most of them to enter different branches of the armed services, a few to enter upon accelerated college programs. Before Easter these boys had left:

SENIORS

FROM WARSAW TO TUNIS—The Class of '43

The Class of '43 is, in all reality, a War Class. In the same month that its members entered E.T.H.S., Hitler's legions crashed into Poland. A year went by and when the Class of 1943 returned as sophomores, the Battle of Britain was reaching its full fury. As juniors, they sat in a hushed gymnasium to hear the President speak of "an act which will live in infamy," and ask Congress for a declaration of war. In their senior year, to meet the demands of the times, they had to make many adjustments and changes in their plans. Boys who would ordinarily have been planning to go to college were awaiting instead their call to service. Some had already gone. Girls as well as boys have pitched wholeheartedly into war work. Everyone has become much more conscious of what his country is and what it stands for, has ceased taking it for granted. Everyone has come to realize the significance and importance of present events. With this realization has come a profound gratitude for the experiences and advantages gained during four years at E.T.H.S.

Looking back, there is much to recall with a chuckle. Everyone remembers small, personal anecdotes — a dance, a party, one particular game or performance, perhaps. But there are some experiences shared by nearly all. There was, for instance, the New Trier game, in freshman year, when Bill Wheeler and Bill Babcock ran wild over the gridiron. Then, the next year, the football team won the Suburban League championship. Who will ever forget the demonstration put on at Fountain Square after Fred Lange fell on the ball over the Oak Park goal line to snap that team's great winning streak? The war still seemed a remote thing. Symbolically, the cafeteria was going full blast, the candy counter was always well stocked, and there were no such things as shortages and rationing. Some students gave up their desserts to put a few cents into something called Greek Relief, but that was the extent of their contribution. Gas and tires were plentiful, and were used in profusion.

With the junior year came the war, but there are many pleasant memories besides—the Junior Hop, for instance, when Lois Alm was voted Queen. The class was for the first time somewhat organized, under the Junior Executive Board. Members of the class began to assume positions of importance in school activities. Sam Robinson was first vice-president of Quadrangle, Paul Cook was junior executive president, Stan Hamilton was head of the newly formed war stamps organization, Dick Kirkley managed the magazine campaign, and Betty Pritchard was vice-president of Pentangle. Such names as Lutz, O'Brien, Bessette, Anderson, and Agase began to appear in accounts of varsity athletics.

In their senior year, members of the Class of '43 took over positions that had seemed remote and unattainable when they entered as freshmen. Jim O'Brien was president of the Central Council and the senior class. Stan Hamilton was student head of the Victory Corps, which supplanted the previous year's War Activities Commission. Sam Robinson took over as president of Quadrangle. Jim Bayer was the editor of the "Evanstonian." Fred Crawford and later Karl Benjamin served as managing editor of the Yearbook. Clarence Peterson was budget manager. "Roz" Kirkpatrick was president of Pentangle, Marjorie Kempnick chairman of the G.A.C., and Marjilou Miles president of G.A.A. All these and many more, friends and classmates, took over important positions and carried them out as well as any of their predecessors.

Through all the activities and most of the classes ran the thread of war, becoming more important day by day, as the Senior Class settled down to meet new burdens and new problems. Nonetheless, Senior Evening, featuring Ted Kramer's version of "Wild Nell of the Plains" and starring such thespians as Hal Garwood, Jack Stout, Hooper Jones, Bob Lochridge, Ray Gerstenberg, and Henry Dunn, was as uproarious as ever. The prize assembly, the brilliant Senior Ball, and finally commencement rounded out the life span of the Class of '43, leaving nothing but memories and the satisfaction that comes from a job well done.

Ralph Sonneborn, Stan Woznicki, Fred Crawford, Dr. Wood, James O'Brien, Mary Jane Stoker, Robert Blackburn, James Ferguson.

Room 104, the Roman Room, with the counsel and guidance of Dr. William R. Wood, is justly proud of the active part its students have played in the events of this school year.

The room challenged and defeated Room 124 in the magazine campaign and led the first floor homerooms in the campaign, but had to bow in the final round to 304. By collecting nearly 3,000 books in the U.S.O. book drive, the room proved that it was not to be outdone in any patriotic effort. In this war year the room has taken part in the purchase of war stamps and bonds, the collection of salvage, the drive for Red Cross funds, and other patriotic projects.

The appearance of the room was enhanced this spring by the installation of new flower boxes; otherwise, recent alumni will find the room looking very much the same as they have known it.

Ann McSwain, Don Gustafson, Rosamond Kirkpatrick, Richard Kirkley, Mr. Nuckols, Bruce Larson, Jean Parker, Tom James.

For 124 this year has brought many conspicuous "firsts," despite the fact that Mr. Nuckols again wore the red tie and that the Mac-Arthur picture still hangs in 164.

Perhaps the accomplishment that shows to the greatest extent the cooperative spirit of the room is the drive for playing cards for convalescent service men in Chicago. This project, suggested to the room by Miss Boyd, was taken up with such enthusiasm that other rooms, and soon the whole school, joined in the drive.

The special distinction of Room 124, now becoming almost a habit, is its record in attaining first place among home rooms on the honor roll. Always 124 can be found at or near the top in scholastic achievement.

Finally breaking one of its longest, age-hallowed traditions, for the first time in many years girls of 124 won a G.A.A. intramural game.

Besides these special triumphs, 124 has been actively engaged in giving 164 close competition in the war stamp sales and — well, anyway—competition in the magazine campaign. Patriotic endeavors have included Red Cross, book, salvage, and scrap drives—all ranking 124 high.

Room 144 has felt the effects of the war keenly and variously. The activities of the room have been handicapped by the departure of many boys to the service or to accelerated college programs. Among those who left were the president of the room, Warner Gabel, and the stamp sales manager and councilman, Robert Lutz. Shortly before Christmas the room was saddened by news of the fatal accident to its former director, Lieutenant Thomas Baldwin, U.S.N.

Under the leadership of Miss Clara Murphy as director and Henry Dunn as president to replace Warner Gabel, the room was high on the list in magazine sales, in the U.S.O. book drive, and in sports competition.

ROOM 164

Good luck always, Mary
Lois Alm

Patricia Simpson, James Malm, Paul Cook, Mr. Irish, Peg Cushman, Lois Alm, Bernard Ardisana.

Mr. Irish's students have purchased more war stamps than any other room. For nine consecutive weeks, the picture of General MacArthur remained in 164. Much of the success was due to the efficient leadership of James Malm and the sales speeches of Bernard Ardisana. Ben Ardisana

Students in 164 were greatly pleased, on returning in September, to see the murals by Nicholas Kaissaroff depicting the Canterbury Pilgrims.

Lucetta Runge, Mr. MacConnell, Helen Goff, Stanley Gill, Barbara Fisher.

Unusual programs are a specialty of Room 364, the center of the activities of the New School. A panel discussion of religion and a radio broadcast were among the programs enjoyed this year.

The New School stresses student responsibility and student leadership in all activities. Committees of students have charge of announcements, posters, sale of war stamps, and all the other phases of home room government.
